

Teacher says stay
between the lines under my eyes lie about the crayons. Teacher's always talking and
when she talks she says
to stay between the lines, but the colors
bleed. All of us lie side by side in a box
underground and we sing, "64 colors bleed."

A black and white micrograph of a tuber, likely a plant root, is centered on a CD-ROM. The tuber shows a complex internal structure with numerous small, dark, circular spots, possibly representing tubercles or cellular inclusions. The CD-ROM's central hole and concentric rings are visible, partially overlapping the micrograph. The entire scene is set against a black background, which is the surface of a vinyl record.
